Job hunter puts CV on billboard

From <http://www.breakingnewsenglish.com/1401/140109-job-hunting-1.html>

A French man with no job tried a new way to get one. He put his CV on a billboard next to a busy road. It was four metres long. It showed the man wearing a Santa Claus hat. His message said: "Trilingual operations manager seeks position in hotels, restaurants, tourism and leisure." About 70,000 people a day saw the CV. Laurent Le Bret, 41, said: "All I want for Christmas is a job." His idea worked. He got a job at a holiday resort ten days later.

The billboard company helped Mr Le Bret. It gave him the space for free. Mr Le Bret saved 2,000 euros (about $2,700) because he did not have to pay. The company's CEO spoke to the France 24 news agency. He said it was an interesting idea and he wanted to help Mr Le Bret. He said he was happy it worked and that Mr Le Bret got a job. Many people contacted Mr Le Bret. They want to do the same thing. There are 3.3 million people in France looking for a job.

The European Union has a plan to stop cars speeding

The European Union (EU) has a plan to stop cars speeding. It hopes to reduce the number of people who die in traffic accidents. Around 30,000 lives are lost each year on Europe's roads. The EU's project uses a technology called intelligent speed authority (ISA). This is a small digital box that is put inside the car. It costs about $380. The transport department said it could cut the number of road deaths by one-third by the year 2020. The system uses satellites that communicate with cars. There are two things that can happen. One is that the driver gets a warning about the speed limit. The other is that the technology automatically puts on the brakes and slows the car down to a safer speed.

Not everyone is happy with this idea. Many people in Britain do not want the EU telling them how to drive. The British transport minister Patrick McLoughlin said it took away the freedom of motorists. British politicians believe the ISA system is unnecessary because the UK has fewer road deaths than other European countries. In 2012, 1,754 people died on British roads. This was down from 1,901 in 2011 and the lowest figure since records began in 1926. In Germany, there were 3,657 fatalities last year. A UK motoring organisation warned that ISA could be dangerous. It said: "If you were overtaking a tractor and suddenly needed to accelerate to avoid [crashing], you would not be able to."
